

Refurbishing the rocker covers

As the paint on the rocker box covers was flaking off and looked awful, Angus Munro decided to have them powder coated by a specialist company. Here he explains.

The specialist Angus Munro chose for the work was Maldon Powder Coating and Shot Blasting. "They did a superb job, flattening the fins to bright aluminium and clearing the threads within the castings. The finish that I chose is called Gritty Black and it has given the same rough finish that the original casting had. Each rocker box was returned in a sealed heavy duty plastic bag to prevent damage. The total price was £156. I would highly recommend this company."

Angus Munro added "the finish shown on the rocker box cover give the impression that the surface is very lumpy. Odd, but it doesn't look like that in reality."
